VERA DUCKWORTH

A modern office interior featuring a kitchen bar with a grey countertop and dark cabinetry, a white subway tile backsplash, and a sink. In the foreground, three wooden bar stools with orange and white striped seats are positioned at the bar. To the right, several round white tables are surrounded by light blue chairs. The ceiling is a dark grid with circular recessed lighting. A wooden planter box with green plants is visible in the background.

When a space is opened, closed and re-configured, the acoustic dynamic in the space changes.

Noise transfer and reverberation are common workspace problems.

Our acoustic solutions address these problems.

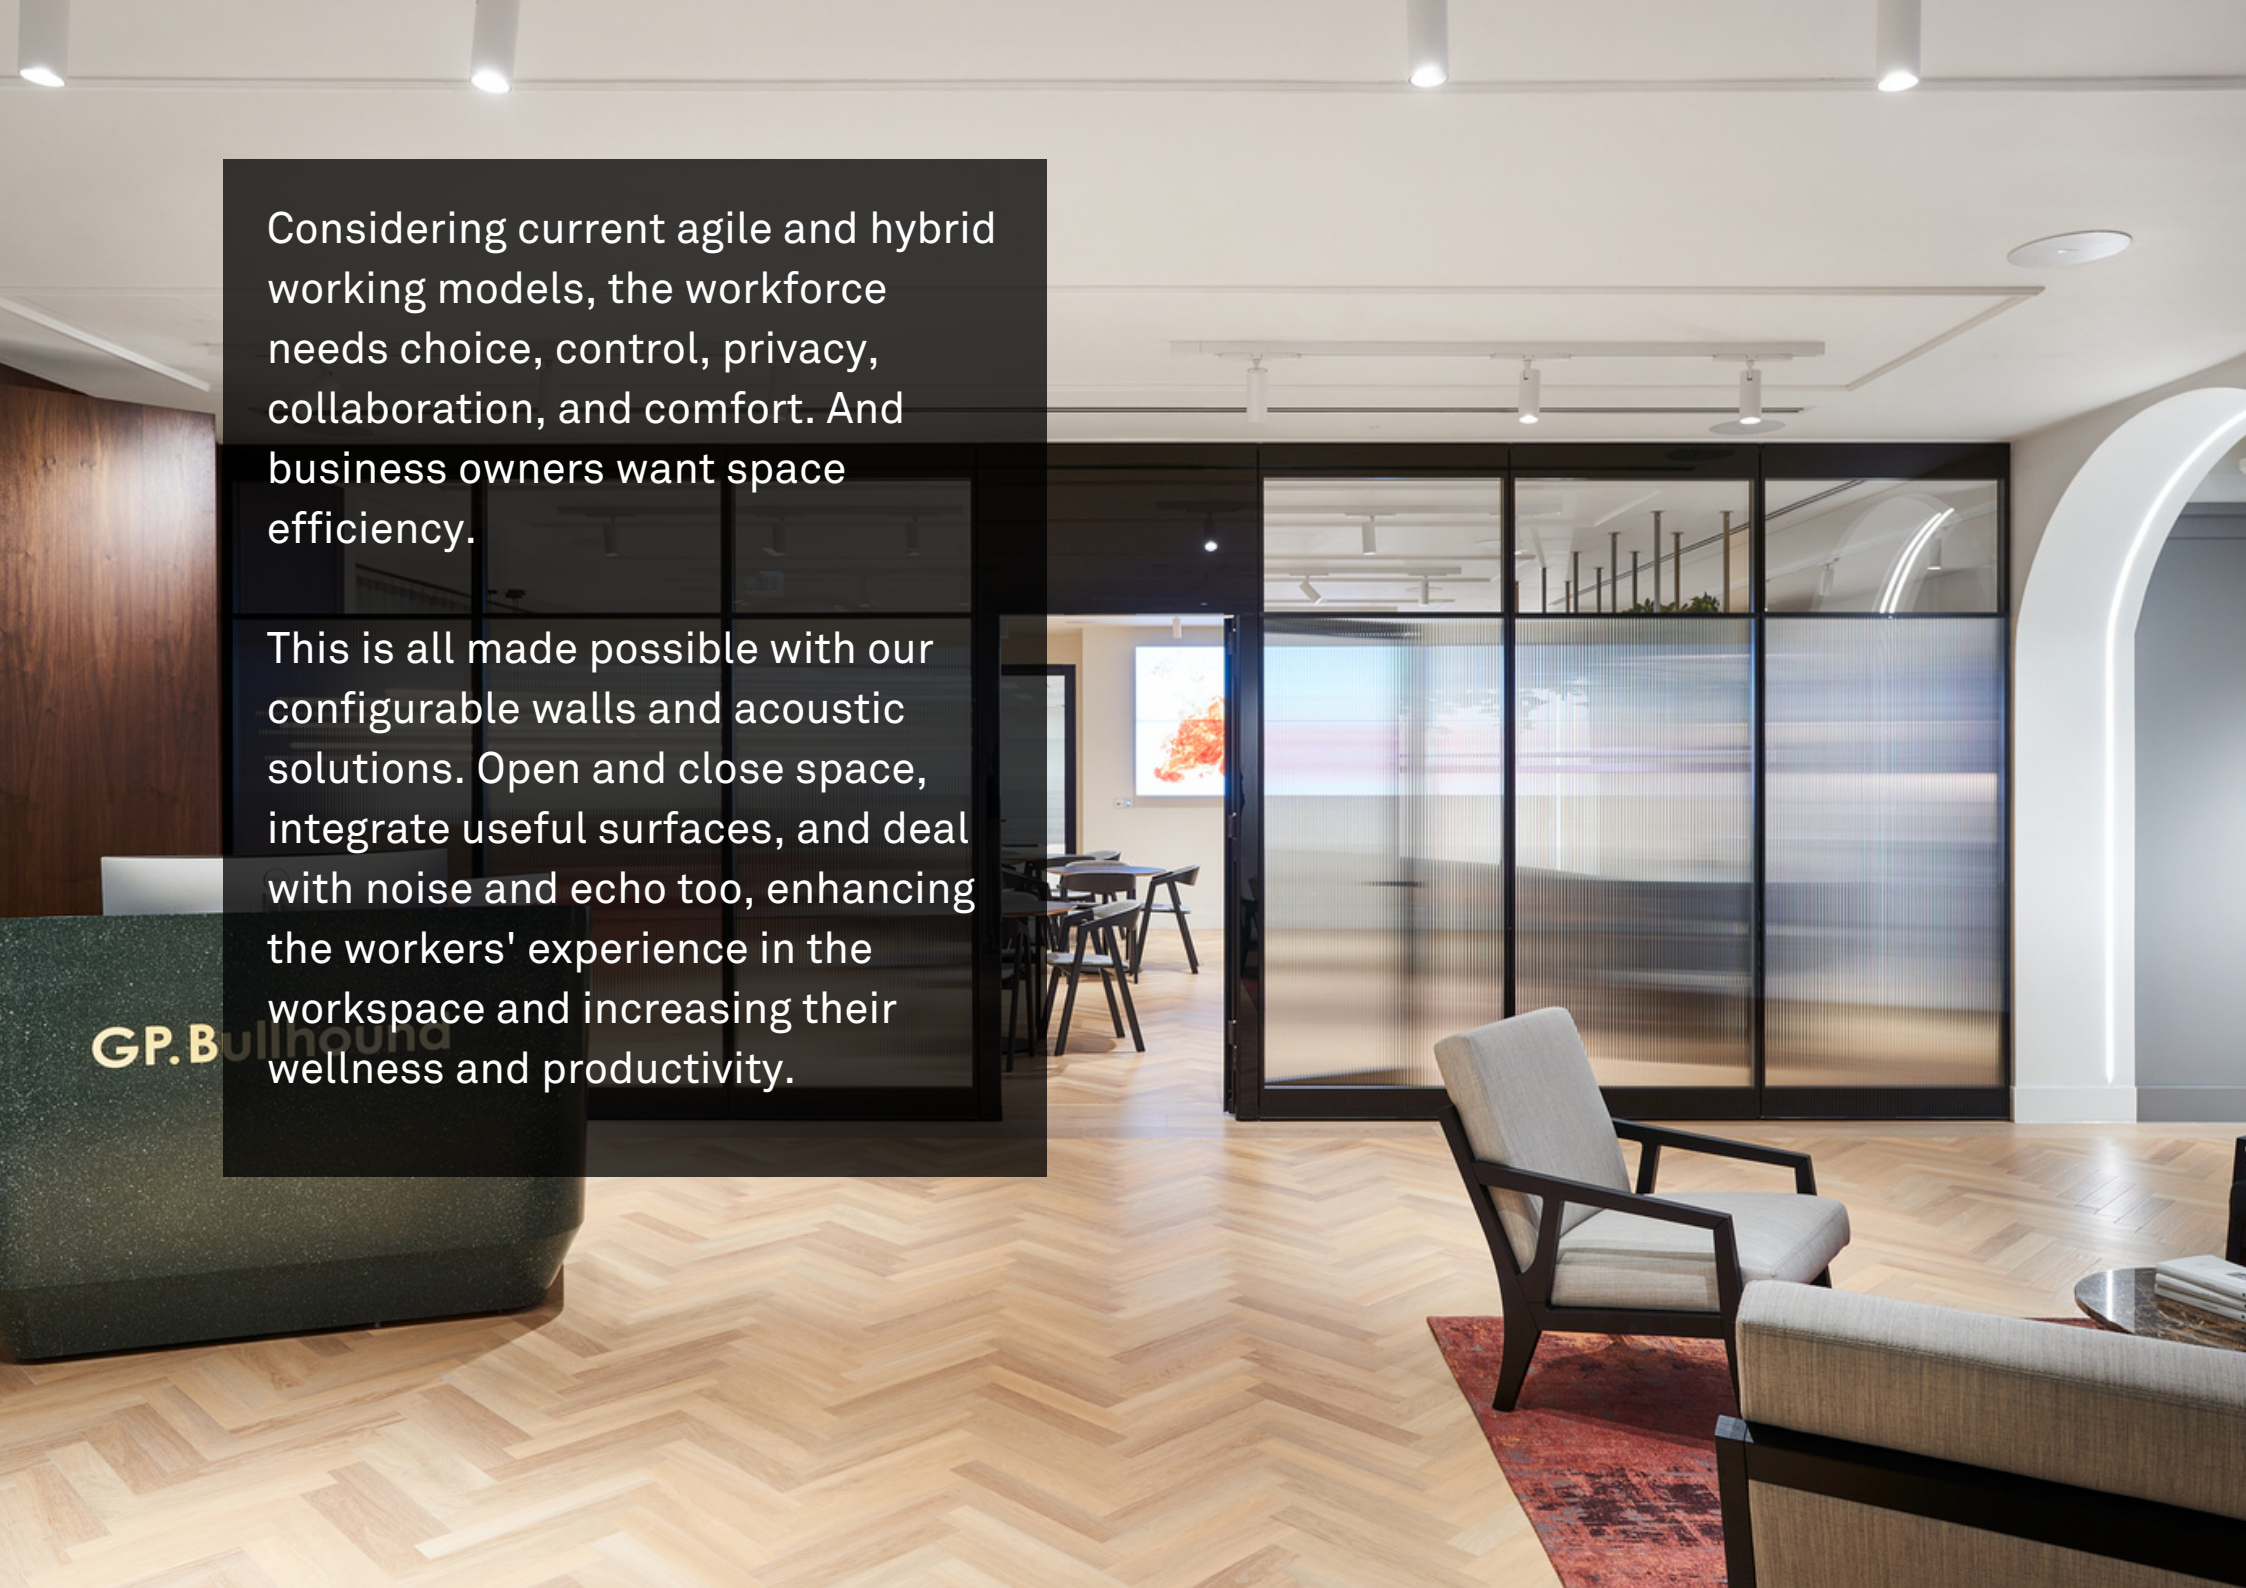

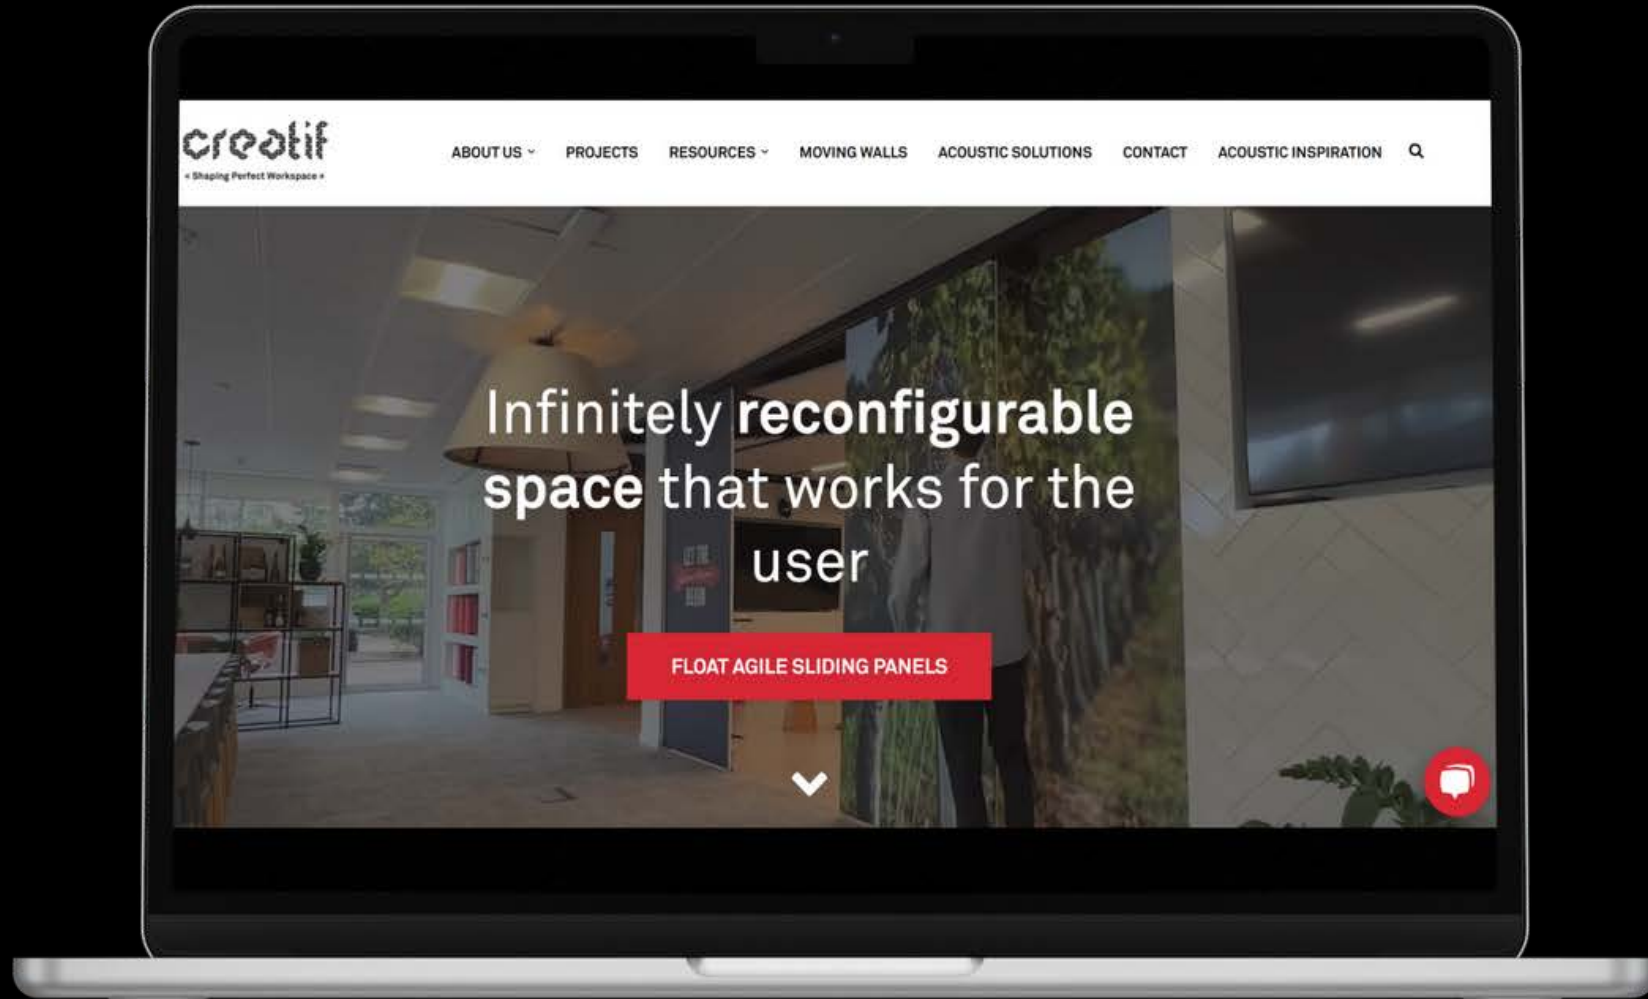

Considering current agile and hybrid working models, the workforce needs choice, control, privacy, collaboration, and comfort. And business owners want space efficiency.

This is all made possible with our configurable walls and acoustic solutions. Open and close space, integrate useful surfaces, and deal with noise and echo too, enhancing the workers' experience in the workspace and increasing their wellness and productivity.
